10 WHY DOESN'T STRAIGHT EDGE AND AUTOMATIC WEAPONS DON'T MIX?

Straight edge is not revolutionary. Revolutionary's are a threat to the status quo. And without the status quo, all of the outspoken straight edge bands who sing against drugs, racism and sexism would have a difficult time obtaining their sugar, caffeine, Nike's and porno's.

Fuck everyone who plays the game for the sake of popularity.

My Notes

well i'm back, back for another round of life-hating games. response to CB2 was, well, overwhelming. i never thought that my two-bit zine would go anywhere except right into the can. power and glory are now mine. i'm right, your wrong, anyway.... since number two, i've relocated Cloudbreak HQ to my own space known as 209, i'm now an official member of the "real world". i'm now also co-habiting with a girl by the name of PJ. she is major inspiration in my life and the only person who can put up with me even for a split second, let alone live with me. some things haven't changed though. i still have the same job, the same life, the same boring ass existence as last time. i still find Hardline, Krishna, and born again Christianity(not in that exact order) to be quite silly. i still have no friends in this religious stronghold known as Springfield. i want no part of the bible-thumping, college-keg-frat scene that keeps this city alive. in all honesty, i thrive on being alone. it keeps me from going completely insane. oh well, onto the matters at hand, again, with CB3, as with CB2, there are no ints. with the latest champions. just with people that count. Mouthpiece are boring thank you very much. OK, to keep things moving, recently the trend seems to be to "bag on those that have "dulled the edge" so to speak. well my feeling is this, who cares? let'em give up and choose other paths. i want everyone to start drinking and selling. i like it when my friend of a lifetime won't talk to me 'cause i won't drink a 40 oz. "insert latest trend booze here" with him. do you know why i like this? because it fuels me, it keeps me pushing on, it keeps my heart pumping acid. been straight and all that. well, i guess that's it for my ranting. i hope i offend someone, it is my one goal. welcome to Cloudbreak three, comin' straight from the front of misery.

Being straight is the best never turn toward drugs and alcohol to solve my prob-not only on an individual basis. I never talk to anyone about being personally, I can't function unless I'm straight. I consider (again on a

...the summer of 1981, I went to Taub explained to me that he was surgically crippling and then monitoring the rehabilitation of their impaired. He said he had no paid positions open but offered me a job volunteer.

When I reported for my first day of work, Taub gave me a tour. As we entered the room where the monkeys were, I was near overpowered by the smell. Filth was caked on the wire cages. Piles of feces covered the cage bottoms. Urine and rust encrusted almost every surface, and rat droppings and live and dead cockroaches were everywhere. Records, soiled clothes, shoes, rags, and other items were scattered helter-skelter throughout the squalid surgery room, even under the operating table.

The monkeys sat amidst this rotting stench in metal boxes just over seventeen inches wide. They had no food dishes. They were picked at the pieces of broken biscuits that had fallen through the sagged cage wire into the soggy accumulations in the waste tray below.

During the following months I got to know the seventeen monkeys well. Twelve of them had surgically crippled (different limbs; these mutilations had been done when they were juveniles) since then, they had torn or bitten off a total of thirty-nine finger limbs.

Eric have you had any relapses? by accident happen to run across something you didn't know about turns up in your food, you check out the ingredients, and WOOPS.

Chris yep yep, in the beginning I had quite a few little slips. like one time I got the ingredients to the muffins at Bonanza. so I'm chowing down after I read them and I thought everything was fine and I gave the ingredients to Megan and she was reading them off out loud and I heard this word "whey" and I have this mouthful. well I didn't feel to good about that.

SEATTLE, HAVEN OF FILTH

Seattle sprawls across the vestiges of King county live an open wound, oozing filth and despair from every glistening millimeter of it's scablike surface. it's inhabitants know this, and they could care less. Seattleites have a keen eye for the weak, and they know no greater sport than wrecking turmoil upon the hearts and mind of all who would stumble upon their foul city. The "U district", the area i've come to call home, is a prime example of the seattle spirit. here walk some of the most wicked and impure examples of humanity. nestled into a 12 block strip of squalor and filth. junkies and dealers roam in rabid packs, feeding off each other with wolfpack like ferocity, drunken frat-boys and wanna-be gangsters brawl in open air traffic, the air a lingering red mist of blood, alcohol, and bodily fluids. gangs of begger children, homeless waifs and drunken anarchists fight amongst themselves for the rights to any passer-by's change, eager for liquor or whatever it is that gives them that dull, glassy stare that never ceases to shake me. they'll shank you on the bus for your transfer slip, laughing all the while. these are not god's children, and they waste no time offering apologies or explanations, yet somehow i feel more attracted to them then i would care to admit. they have the look of the all to wise, and someone like that should either be avoided or rapidly dealt with, since i can do neither, i find myself in a position where i must confuse them, try to convince them that i am too a Seattleite, although my very soul weeps at the thought, for my survival likely depends upon this deception. william

John do you think that veganism should be just compassion or do think that violence can play a part in it?
Eric do you think that veganism and militancy should go hand in hand?
Chris i don't think that they go together at all. you can talk about setting fire to a meat packing plant or whatever, there could be people in there or whatever, you don't want to kill anybody, well i don't want to kill anybody.
Eric could you see holding a grudge against someone who isn't vegan?
i wouldn't hold a grudge. i look back on when i was a meat eater for 18 years, so i can't really look at somebody and say their a bad person or anything, it's just ignorance. i hope that one day they can see the way or something and if i can help them it makes me happy. i don't i don't really hate people cause they eat meat, i just feel sorry for them.
Eric do you belong to any organizations?
Chris i belong to the American Vegan Society, not really a lot i can do for em except donate. but when i move to Boston i plan on joining the Boston Vegetarian Society, they said they're very active, so i'm sure that i'll be doing things to help them out.
Eric this is kinda weird, but how do you feel about the veganism/abortion issue?
Chris i see it as a females choice. it's kinda hazy for me. i can see both sides, i still see it has a choice, but there are other solutions.
Eric the way i see it, through vegetarianism/veganism, you don't infringe on an animals rights, so why would you infringe on a females rights.
Chris right, exactly
John how does Woodbox Fanzine work for you?
Chris well i hope my columns get better. it gives me a chance to use my voice.
Eric do you think that you columns can do a good job of getting your point across?

FACT: FIVE OUT OF FIVE KIDS WHO KILL LOVE SLAYER

Chris well yeah, to people who read zines.

Eric do you think that lonnie davis is a total piece of shit and deserves to die?

Chris definitely, yes i do.

Eric so you are guys are moving to Boston, do you have high hopes for that?

Chris i wanna go and be casual and have fun. see a few shows and maybe find someone to spend the rest of my life with.

John and have a keen fashion sense like eric Cloudbreak
Eric who has a terrible fashion sense. (but not really. ed.)

Eric so other than Boston and veganism, what else have you been up to lately? on a day to day level.

Chris just waiting to move, watch TV, alot of Comedy Central(yeah!!! ed.) at Woodbox HQ. that's where we do all our stuff.

Eric so how about when you came to SF and hung out at Cloudbreak Industries? what'd you guys think about that?

Chris the greatest cause i got to sleep on a futon, and i love futons. and all the stuff we got.

John eric for giving us tons of Kinko's stuff, and printing a billion pounds of zines and.....

Chris we got lots of laminates.
John and PJ for cooking us great beans.

Chris and also the fat cat.
John oh lard the cat and hanging out at the mall with all the hotties(whooooa!!!!!!) and PJ calling us morning glories.

Chris it was great.
Eric anything you wanna add at the end so we can wrap this up?

Chris final words? uhhh, i don't wanna say anything cheesy like "go vegan", but i'll say "go vegan". i don't know, read Diet For a New America. i don't know just move to Boston and get away from the Bible Belt.

Eric something else i was going to ask. how do you feel about religion? personally, cause this isn't a music int. or a hardcore int. or a SE int. or whatever. can you relate to any single one, or can you see rights and wrongs in all of 'em.

Chris well i can see some rights in 'em in i guess. i think moral values are good. it's just that some people who claim to be a certain religion don't live up to their values. i don't prescribe to any religion at all, i just have my own ethics and i try to live up to those.

WE DON'T NEED TO EAT!
Eric do you think that veganism and spirituality can go hand in hand?

Chris well there are religions that have vegan monks and stuff, but i don't know. i think it's a personal choice. it can yeah, it can go with anything. it's just a natural way of living, it should be the basic way, every one should live like that. i don't know, religion doesn't really come in to my life. i don't have anything against it. Eric any last words from the Woodbox?

John if you wanna go vegan, but don't think you can do it, don't lose hope, use ovo-lactoism as a stepping stone. don't let people get you down because of it. as long as your trying..... FO EAT!
